ICUS — History

The International Conference on the Unity of the Sciences (ICUS), sponsored by The International Cultural Foundation, was founded in 1972 to initiate a meaningful exchange among scholars and scientists from around the world.

ICUS I

The First ICUS was held in New York, November, 1972. Twenty scientists and scholars from eight nations participated along with 20 observers under the co-sponsorship of the Council on Unified Research and Education (CURE).

The theme of this conference was "Moral Orientation of the Sciences." Participants, under the direction of the honorary chairman, Edward Haskell, discussed the fragmentation of modern science and ways this dilemma could be eliminated.

ICUS II

The Second ICUS was held in Tokyo, November, 1973. Sixty scientists and scholars representing 12 countries attended along with some 40 observers to discuss the theme, "Modern Science and Moral Values."

The academic program, under the Chairmanship of Nobusige Sawada, Professor of Philosophy at Keio University was developed by the Executive Committee of Japanese Scholars to attempt to define a standard of value by which science could base its endeavors and improve the state of mankind.

ICUS III

The Third ICUS was held in London, November, 1974 with 128 scientists and scholars from 27 countries participating, including 18 Nobel Laureates.

The theme of this, the largest ICUS conference, was "Science and Absolute Values." The Third ICUS was broken into 4 committees of about 30 participants to deal more closely with the conference sub-themes, Quality of Life: Physical, Mental and Spiritual Aspects; Value Change and Absolute Values; The Unity of the Sciences; and The Idea of the University in a Troubled Society.

Honorary Chairman of the conference was Lord Adrian and papers were presented on the above topics by such noted scholars as Kenneth Mellanby, R.V. Jones, Russell L. Ackoff, Albert Szent-Gyorgyi, Piet Hein, Ragnar A. Granit, Yehezkel Dror, Tosio Kitagawa, and Werner Forssmann.
